'I'm in' for 2013: Nenshi

Naheed Nenshi speaks to Metro on Wednesday about why he decided to seek a second term as mayor of Calgary. ROBSON FLETCHER/METRO

Housing. Mayor says Calgary has a 'moral and financial' imperative to broadly legalize secondary suites, and predicts it could be an election issue

ROBSON FLETCHER
robson.fletcher@metronews.ca

Mayor Naheed Nenshi ended months of speculation Wednesday and announced he will indeed run for re-election next year.

It was widely believed the mayor would seek a second term, which, due to a recent change in provincial law, will be four years long, rather than the current three.

Nenshi has been buoyed by his persistent, personal popularity and a recent survey in which Calgarians reported being happier with their lives and more satisfied with city services than they've been in years.

"But we've still got a lot of work to do," Nenshi told Metro.

The mayor cited RouteAhead, the long-term strategic plan for Calgary Transit, and NextCity, an initiative aimed at "transforming city planning" and "building better stuff," as two of his top priorities.

"And we've got to get some real good headway on our conversations with the province around our city charter," Nenshi added.

On that topic, the mayor said he wasn't discouraged by recent public comments from Municipal Affairs Minister Doug Griffiths, who said "that's a no" when asked if he would support expanded taxation powers for municipalities.

"What's interesting is the minister and the premier have said a whole bunch of things, but neither of them has actually picked up the phone and called me about it," Nenshi said.

"So I'm sticking with what they signed and what they promised in the (provincial) election."

Ald. Andre Chabot, who was toying with the idea of running for mayor in 2013, said Wednesday he now sees "no point in doing that."

"I don't believe I could defeat the mayor," Chabot said.

West LRT

A long time coming

November 2007: Project gets green light
City council approves funding and alignment of the West LRT line, relying heavily on a functional study conducted in the early 1980s. The initial budget for the project is pegged at a little over $700 million.

June 2008: Design becomes focus
City officials begin a massive public consultation with area residents on station design and community integration. One station on the line at Westbrook will be the first in Calgary to exist underground.

February 2010: Construction begins
Just months after being awarded the design-build contract, SNC Lavalin and its partners begin construction of the West LRT line.

September 2010: Budget booms
Officials hint the budget for the West LRT line is now in the neighbourhood of $1 billion due largely to land acquisition costs and other unanticipated expenses. The final cost for the project would end up being roughly $1.4 billion.

May 15, 2012: Trains begin rolling
Preliminary testing begins of trains but officials maintain the opening date for the new leg won't be until March 2013.

Nov. 7, 2012: Opening date announced
During a presentation at the new Sunalta station, officials announce they plan to begin public service on the West LRT earlier then expected. A public opening event is planned for Dec. 8 and full service will start Dec. 10.

West LRT. Opening day had been pushed back to March 2013, but has now returned to its original date

robson.fletcher@metronews.ca

Calgary's hotly anticipated West LRT line will indeed open on Dec. 10, city officials confirmed Wednesday, putting the mega-project back on its original schedule and just slightly over budget.

"This takes our LRT system to a whole new level," Mac Logan, the city's general manager of transportation, said at the new Sunalta station.

The city's first-ever elevated station is the easternmost of six new stations along eight kilometres of additional track, extending rail service westward from downtown to 69th Street.

Logan said the massive project, which involved three million man-hours of labour, is shaping up to come in just $35 million over the initial $1.4-billion budget.

The city expects 30,000 people to use the new line on opening day. The average commute time from downtown to the 69th Street station is estimated at 12 minutes.

Ald. John Mar's ward also includes a section of the line, and he believes the project will be well worth the cost.

"This is going to have a huge impact and I think it's going to be worth every single dollar," he said.

Joanna Stathonikos is excited about the new line and plans to use it almost every day to commute to work and university. The Coach Hill resident said each commute currently takes her about 45 minutes by bus.

"It's going to be quicker because there's not going to be traffic on Bow Trail," she said. "I've been waiting for this for over a year, since I moved up there."

Ald. Richard Pootmans, whose ward also includes a section of the line, marvelled at the "spectacularly beautiful" Sunalta station.

"This station is built to last us 100 years," he said. "It's cost-effective to do it this way, rather than build something that will not last the test of time."

Details

- Show and tell. The city plans to host a "public opening" to show off the new line and stations on Dec. 8, ahead of the beginning of fare service on Dec. 10.
- Green space. More than 1,700 new trees are being planted along the new LRT line.
- Extended bus service. The city also plans to introduce a bus rapid transit service between Westbrook Station, Heritage Station and Mount Royal University, Ald. Brian Pincott said.

Locals weigh in on second term

Metro asked Calgarians what they thought of Tuesday night's U.S. presidential election outcome:

Street view

"I'm glad that it's over and TV's back to normal. I didn't like the attack ads. I thought they were childish. But it's good that Obama is back in because you can only get so much done in four years, and to really get your vision realized, I think you do need eight years."

Weston Covert, 27, planner

"I think both candidates were similar in terms of their ideology despite what their spin was. I don't really find them all that different and I don't think all that much was at stake, to be honest. But I'm happy that Obama won just because of some of the more extreme ideologies that seemed to follow Romney around."

Christine Haylock, 32, landscape architect

"I wanted to see Obama do well. It was tighter than I thought it would be.... I think people need to see things start happening. The economy in the country needs to change and that's reflected on him and I think he understands that. He was made out to be some miracle when he was first elected, but there's only so much you can do in four years."

Kris Dietrich, 33, project manager

"We watched the election at a pub. It was very dramatic. It kind of made us laugh a little bit. I was happy that Obama won. From what I've seen before, it seems Republicans like to go to war more. The Democrats seem to be more for people than big businesses. Obama walked into a shi--y situation. There was no way he could have turned that around in four years."

Ross Irwin, 31, EMT

Big thumbs-up for Obama election win

U.S election. Many Calgarians express relief as Barack Obama secures second term as president

lisa.wilton@metronews.ca

He may not have been everyone's first choice, but many Calgarians are happy with U.S. President Barack Obama's re-election on Monday night.

Marketing consultant Richard Einarson was "elated" with the win, saying Obama has made good progress on making the American health-care system more accessible and has stood up for women's and gay rights.

"When you think about it, he accomplished a huge amount in four years," said Einarson, who watched election results at home, wearing an Obama T-shirt he bought at a Madonna concert in 2008.

Einarson said although he is happy with the outcome, Obama still has a lot of work to do to repair the U.S. economy.

"This situation is a big threat to Canada and the rest of the world," he said. "I'm hopeful he can continue to advocate for the American middle class. They have taken so many hits over the past five or six years and could use a break.

Inspiring

"Obama ... has such great leadership qualities and has the potential to inspire so many people."

Lachlan Mackintosh

Lachlan Mackintosh, another local Obama supporter, admitted he felt "low-grade anxiety" about Republican challenger Mitt Romney's chances of winning.

"Last night was a big relief," he said.

"Obama is such a great speaker, has such great leadership qualities and has the potential to inspire so many people. I think Obamacare is vitally important, and he knows he needs to bring the troops home and get the economy rocking and rolling again."

The Obama love didn't extend to Liane Gossett, however.

Gossett, who works in the oil-and-gas field, was disappointed in the outcome and said her main concern is that the second-term president will kill the controversial Keystone XL pipeline.

"I don't think he will be good for the American economy, and especially not good for Alberta's economy if the pipeline is stopped," she said.

Richard Einarson, wearing a T-shirt from the 2008 U.S. election, is thrilled with Barack Obama's win but admits the president has a lot of work to do.

Korean War veteran Rudy Rank, who was busy selling poppies in Bankers Hall Tuesday, said the massive Christmas tree up in the downtown centre is wrongfully drawing attention away from Remembrance Day. JEREMY NOLAIS/METRO

Has Christmas come too early to Calgary malls?

It's that time of year. Decorations begin popping up in some local shopping centres, a few homes

JEREMY NOLAIS
jeremy.nolais@metronews.ca

O Christmas Tree! O Christmas Tree! Why are you here so early?

That's the question on the minds of some Calgarians working, shopping and fundraising in Bankers Hall downtown, including Korean War veteran Rudy Rank.

The 84-year-old was busy doling out poppies in exchange for pocket change just metres from a giant Christmas tree that a security guard confirmed was put up over the weekend.

"I think it's wrong," Rank said of the tree. "I guess they are trying to drown us out or something."

Rank said he firmly believes the ornaments, wreaths and oversized trees should be kept in their respective boxes at least until Monday, the day after Remembrance Day.

But feelings on whether Christmas comes a little too early nowadays were mixed among a dozen other people Metro surveyed inside the centre Tuesday.

"I don't get too worried about it.... I more just go with the flow," said Yvonne Lang, who was standing in line for her morning java.

But others questioned the intent of the decorations, seen sparsely scattered through a couple of stores and hallways.

"I just think it's too much," said Tori Michelle, who believes Christmas decorations should stay down until at least Dec. 1. "It's all about buying as many presents as you can. It's not really right in my opinion."

But Michelle's boyfriend, Jose Mohseni, was quick to point out that many other cultures begin preparing months in advance for their own holiday celebrations. "As long as it's done for the right reasons, I think it's OK," he said.

Staff at Bankers Hall said much of it comes down to logistics when attempting to bring in staff to put up the decorations, especially with the Remembrance Day long weekend coming up.

Jingle all the way

Bankers Hall is not alone in its early yuletide spirit.

- Marlborough Mall has already hung an oversized present bow above one of its entrances and strung some ornamental balls from a roof near the food court.

MADD launches 25th Project Red Ribbon Campaign

Milestone. With upcoming holiday season, police and emergency officials urge community to do its part to crack down on drunk driving

jeremy.nolais@metronews.ca

A quarter-century on, organizers with Calgary's chapter of Mothers Against Drunk Driving would just as soon retire their annual Project Red Ribbon Campaign.

Millions of the tiny symbols are distributed every year in hopes of reminding people to plan a safe ride home if they're going to be drinking.

But MADD national president Denise Dubyk told the crowd gathered for the launch of this year's campaign, the 25th in the organization's history, that she yearns for a day when drunk-driving-related deaths no longer occur.

"Wear your red ribbon during this holiday season and all year long," Dubyk added. "Wear it proudly as a symbol of your commitment to drive safe and sober and as a way to honour those that have been killed in impaired-driving crashes."

But even through tragedy, with hundreds of lives being lost at the hands of intoxicated motorists every year, Dubyk said there is cause for hope, pointing to many emergency officials and volunteers who work hand-in-hand with the organization.

One of those individuals is University of Calgary student Faryal Shah. She helped form a group working in conjunction with MADD known as Save An Innocent Life after her best friend, 20-year-old Arsh Brar, was killed in an impaired-driving collision last January.

"That hurt is just as fresh as the day we found out," she said of Brar's death. "It's just as hard to talk to his parents, it's just as hard to talk about him or see pictures.... It's easy to say that we have got to get the message out about impaired driving, but it still happens."

Shah and her peers have been working to bring additional Checkstops and drunk-driving-awareness campaigns to the U of C campus.

Police chief encouraged by impaired stats, slams critics

Rick Hanson
METRO

Calgary's police chief said Wednesday he's encouraged by enforcement statistics for the first month of strengthened impaired-driving legislation in the city and pulled no punches when addressing critics of the new measures.

Data provided to Metro Tuesday indicates a 55 per cent drop in driving suspensions related to blood-alcohol violations between .05 and .08 in September, the first month in which such penalties were lengthened from 24 hours to three days.

Police Chief Rick Hanson said the new law, which also saw indefinite suspensions introduced for those with a reading over .08 in July, has "elevated the discussion" around impaired driving and was quick to criticize those who believe it's "their God-given right to drive."

"There's a huge component of society that seems intent upon making it easy and acceptable to drive while you're impaired," he said, adding those people should spend time with the families of innocent victims. "The reality is really quite simple — people die."

But Ian Savage, co-president of the Calgary Defence Lawyers Association, took offence to Hanson's comments. He and other lawyers in the city are currently working to file a formal legal challenge of the legislation, but said it concerns the provision that sees guilt assumed without trial.

"The problem is that, as of July 1, the new law renders a trial pointless," Savage said. "In fact, it is an attempt by the government to coerce people into pleading guilty rather than having their constitutional right to a trial."

Manslaughter. Teens plead guilty in fatal shooting of five-year-old on Alberta reserve

Three teens have pleaded guilty to manslaughter in the shooting of a five-year-old boy on an Alberta reserve.

Ethan Yellowbird was sleeping in his bed when he was struck in the head with a bullet fired at a house on the Samson Cree First Nation in Hobbema in July 2011.

The teens are to appear in court again Nov. 21 to set a date for sentencing.

The Crown says other charges of aggravated assault and intentional discharge of a firearm will probably be withdrawn at that time.

The reserve had been plagued by gang violence for years before the shooting, and police often had trouble getting witnesses to talk about crimes.

RCMP Insp. Charles Wood of the Hobbema detachment said that since then people on the reserve have been working well with the RCMP and, although gang activity remains prevalent, the resulting violence is not as bad as it was in 2011.

The use of weapons is down, Wood said, as is the number of drive-by shootings.

"We still do have shots fired where occupied homes are struck, but again not with the frequency that we had last year."

Roy Louis, a band member who acts as a liaison with the RCMP, believes the reserve has changed for the better.

"Children are outside playing," he said. "It feels like a safe community after all these years." THE CANADIAN PRESS

Aggravated assault

- Guilty pleas. Three teens, who were youths at the time of the crime, entered guilty pleas at the beginning of a two-week trial in Wetaskiwin.
- Hobbema. The Samson reserve is one of four that make up the Hobbema community, about an hour's drive south of Edmonton.

New bills honour veterans, thwart counterfeiters

Slow transition. Since $20 bills make up half of the notes in circulation, the Bank of Canada says, it will take a long time for the new notes to replace the old ones

ROBSON FLETCHER

Paper or plastic?

The Bank of Canada continues to opt for the latter, unveiling in Calgary on Wednesday the country's newest form of currency: the polymer $20 bill.

It joins the $50 and $100 polymer bills already introduced and now in wide circulation.

In addition to lasting two-and-a-half times longer than cotton-based paper bills, the new notes also feature a host of security features designed to thwart counterfeiters.

The bills were unveiled at the The Military Museums of Calgary, as the artwork on the notes depicts the Canadian National Vimy Memorial.

That choice was welcomed by Erin McDonald, a descendant of Pte. John George Pattison, the only Albertan to be awarded a Victoria Cross for his efforts in the April 1917 assault on the strategic ridge in France.

"I am personally moved that the Bank of Canada has chosen to commemorate the sacrifices made by my great-great-grandfather and over 10,000 other members of the Canadian corps who died or were wounded there," she said.

But don't expect to see the new bills coming out of ATMs right away, said Bank of Canada director Bonnie DuPont, who noted their introduction will be "gradual."

Breastfeeding. Critics slam radio station's post

JEREMY NOLAIS
jeremy.nolais@metronews.ca

Officials with a local radio station are apologizing after a Facebook post concerning the topic of public breastfeeding drew heated criticism Wednesday.

Personalities on 90.3 AMP Radio's morning show raised a discussion on the air about behaviour that makes people feel awkward. Someone also added a post to the station's Facebook page concerning the topic that read, "There are some things you SHOULD NOT DO IN PUBLIC. Nose picking, any-kind-of-nail-clipping, breast feeding, snot rocketing & armpit-sniffing."

The station later removed the reference to breastfeeding but not before nearly 700 replies had been posted, with many criticizing the statement.

"Absolutely disgusting. Give your heads a shake AMP. You've started a war with this one," wrote one person.

Another labelled it "discrimination," before adding, "This is sad."

Paul Kaye, AMP's program director, apologized for the post but accused some people of blowing the matter out of proportion.

"Of course AMP Radio supports breastfeeding — it's the most natural and healthy of activities," Kaye added.

'Tis the season. Edmonton rocked by winter storm

Edmontonians woke up to a dump of snow overnight Wednesday, causing havoc in the capital region. LAURIE CALLSEN/METRO EDMONTON

Heavy snow blanketed Edmonton and area Wednesday morning, causing traffic snarls and delays as the region was pelted with upwards of 25 centimetres of snow.

Snow-removal crews hit the streets early in the day and a seasonal parking ban is likely coming to the city on Friday.

Roadway-maintenance director Bob Dunford said crews will first get arterial roads cleared and will focus on some of the areas where a roadway ban would be in effect.

Environment Canada had predicted the storm could dump as much as 25 centimetres on the region before tapering off and moving into Saskatchewan.

The storm played havoc on commuters and by mid-afternoon Wednesday the Edmonton Police Service was asking people to just stay home.

"If you're already at work and there's any way to leave work earlier and avoid rush hour, we recommend it," said EPS spokesperson Lisa Sobchyshyn.

Starting at 6 a.m. Wednesday, there were 201 property-damage collisions and 12 injury collisions reported to police. RYAN TUMILTY/METRO WITH FILES FROM CANADIAN PRESS

Student privacy not breached: Board of Education

Thieves raided two southeast Calgary schools late Tuesday or early Wednesday, according to police, but officials say no student data was stored on the devices.

According to duty Insp. Patty McCallum, an alarm was triggered at Douglasdale School around midnight and electronics were stolen.

An elementary school in Cranston was also broken into and computers were seized there as well, according to Calgary Board of Education spokesperson Karen Drummond.

She added, however, that many of the devices taken were brand new and contained no personal information about students at the school. The other devices that were taken only allow access to data through a central server.

McCallum said police continue to investigate but have yet to determine if the thefts are linked. JEREMY NOLAIS/METRO

Province alters pathology testing rules

The Alberta government says it's standardizing its approval rules and improving its information systems to prevent further errors in medical screening and testing. ‘This wasn’t a conspiracy of silence’

Former Penn State president Graham Spanier leaves court Wednesday in Harrisburg, Pa. JASON MINICK/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Penn State sex abuse. Complaints about Sandusky showering with children allegedly not properly reported

Former Penn State president Graham Spanier was arraigned and released on bail at a brief court appearance Wednesday on charges he lied about and concealed child-sex-abuse allegations involving former assistant football coach Jerry Sandusky.

Spanier, accompanied by his wife, signed paperwork after his bail was set at $125,000 US, but he was not required to post any of that amount. He was ordered to forfeit his passport and be fingerprinted. He didn’t enter a plea.

Afterward, defence attorney Elizabeth Ainslie told reporters her client is “not guilty, absolutely” and disputed prosecutors’ claims Spanier conspired with university athletic director Tim Curley and vice-president Gary Schultz. She said Spanier, who testified before a grand jury in the matter, has not been given the opportunity to present his side of the story.

“This wasn’t a conspiracy of silence,” she said, echoing the charge made last week by state Attorney General Linda Kelly. “That is ridiculous.”

U.S. army. Two female officers admit sending nude photos to general

Two female U.S. army officers testified Wednesday they provided nude photos to a general facing sex-crime charges.

One of them, a married captain, testified that Brig. Gen. Jeffrey Sinclair repeatedly asked her to send him nude photos of herself, which she said made her uncomfortable, the Fayetteville Observer reported. Eventually, she said she placated the married general by sending him downloaded pornographic photos of other women, cropped so that their faces weren’t visible.

The testimony came during the third day of a hearing at Fort Bragg to determine whether Sinclair will go on trial for multiple criminal charges including forcible sodomy, wrongful sexual conduct and adultery, which is a crime under the U.S. military justice system. The allegations against Sinclair involve relationships with five women other than his wife.

Sinclair served as a deputy commander of the 82nd Airborne Division in Afghanistan until he was relieved of his duties in May amid a criminal investigation and sent back to North Carolina.

A female major also testified Wednesday that she sent photos of her breasts and a personal video to Sinclair.

The major said she had served as a company commander under Sinclair and that they became friends after they were no longer in the same chain of command.

Olympian’s hotel mayhem settled in Nashville court

A Nashville judge signed off Wednesday on a deal between two-time Olympic gold medallist snowboarder Shaun White and prosecutors to settle public-intoxication and vandalism charges.

Susan Niland, the Nashville district attorney’s spokeswoman, said prosecutors agreed to dismiss charges if White completed alcohol treatment, performed 24 hours of community service and paid restitution. The vandalism charge was dismissed on Wednesday because White already has paid restitution to the Nashville hotel where police say he drunkenly destroyed a telephone.

Californians vote: Death penalty to stay despite costs

California voters rejected the latest attempt to repeal the state’s death penalty, dealing a blow to activists who saw the election as their best chance to end capital punishment there. Officials were still counting ballots, but it was apparent Wednesday that voters rejected a measure to end the death penalty by a margin of 52 per cent to 48 per cent. The defeat came even though recent polling showed concern growing over the cost of capital punishment.

The state has executed just 13 convicts, and its death row has ballooned to 726 inmates since capital punishment was reinstated in 1978. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Netanyahu needs to mend ties with Obama

Tilt toward Romney. Israeli leader has decades-old friendship with Republican challenger and his campaign bankroller, U.S. casino billionaire Sheldon Adelson

U.S. President Barack Obama's re-election has left Israel's prime minister in a bind.

Benjamin Netanyahu repeatedly has clashed with Obama and was widely seen as backing Republican challenger Mitt Romney in the American election. Yet in the coming months, Netanyahu may need American support more than ever as the Palestinians seek upgraded recognition at the UN and the world grapples with the Iranian nuclear program.

"It seems like it is not such a good morning for Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu," Israeli Cabinet minister Eli Yishai told reporters early Wednesday as news of Obama's victory emerged.

The concern reflected the widespread perception in Israel that poor personal chemistry between the two leaders could affect the broader relationship between their governments, particularly if Netanyahu is re-elected in upcoming parliamentary elections. The Israeli leader is the front-runner in the Jan. 22 race, according to polls.

The chilly relations are a result of style and substance. The two men have vastly different world views — Netanyahu's hawkish positions on security and support for free-market capitalism are much more in line with the Republicans — and they have never appeared comfortable with one another. Settler homes. European powers criticize Israel's decision to move ahead

Germany, Britain and France criticized Israel on Wednesday over its decision to go ahead with the construction of more than 1,200 new homes for Jewish settlers in east Jerusalem and the West Bank.

The three European powers warned that the move could jeopardize efforts to restart the Mideast peace process. Palestinians regard the areas where the homes will be built as part of their future independent homeland.

Israel insists the settlements issue will be resolved when borders are defined through negotiations. Unlike the Palestinians and the rest of the international community, it claims annexed east Jerusalem as part of its capital and does not consider the Jewish areas there to be settlements.

More than 500,000 Israelis have moved to the West Bank and east Jerusalem since Israel captured those territories and Gaza in 1967. Israel withdrew soldiers and settlers from Gaza in 2005. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Behind the move

Israel's announcement Tuesday is seen as a signal to the Palestinians that they should consider the possible consequences of asking the UN General Assembly this month to upgrade their status to non-member observer state.

- The 193-member General Assembly is dominated by countries sympathetic to the Palestinian cause and the petition for a status upgrade is assured.
- Last year, the Palestinians failed to receive the necessary approval from the UN Security Council for their bid to become a full member state.

Israel politics

Peres squelches talk of running for PM in January

Israeli President Shimon Peres is playing down speculation that he might run for prime minister.

The 89-year-old Nobel peace laureate said Wednesday he plans on completing the final two years of his term.

The presidency is a respected but largely ceremonial post.

Aides to Peres said political operatives from various centrist parties have asked him to return to politics as head of a dovish bloc. Peres is seen as one of the few figures capable of challenging Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu in January's parliamentary elections. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Georgia tensions

Presidents' men walk out over abuse arrests

Supporters of President Mikhail Saakashvili walked out of Georgia's parliament Wednesday to protest the arrests of the top military officer and a former defence minister in connection with the alleged abuse of soldiers.

The arrests and the walkout marked the most serious outburst of tensions since the Oct. 1 parliamentary election, in which a coalition led by billionaire businessman and philanthropist Bidzina Ivanishvili defeated the ruling party. Ivanishvili became the new prime minister, but Saakashvili remains president for another year. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

L.A. County voters approve mandating condom use by porn performers

Los Angeles County voters have approved a measure requiring porn performers to wear condoms while filming sex scenes, prompting a pledge by the adult-entertainment industry to sue to overturn the measure.

With 100 per cent of the county's precincts reporting, Measure B passed 56 per cent to 44 per cent in Tuesday's election.

The measure requires adult-film producers to apply for a permit from the county Department of Public Health to shoot sex scenes. Permit fees will finance periodic inspections of film sets to enforce compliance.

The AIDS Healthcare Foundation, which sponsored the initiative, says the measure will help safeguard the public, as well as porn workers, from sexually transmitted infections.

But the adult-film industry, which is largely centred in the San Fernando Valley in suburban Los Angeles, says the requirement is unnecessary since the industry already polices itself by requiring performers to undergo monthly tests for HIV and other infections.

The industry also says porn viewers will not watch sex scenes with condoms, forcing adult-film producers to relocate to where they can make movies that will sell. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

A novel explanation for regional baby boom

Fifty Shades of Grey. Windsor hospital executive says racy book's release coincides with recent spike in baby deliveries

windsor@metronews.ca

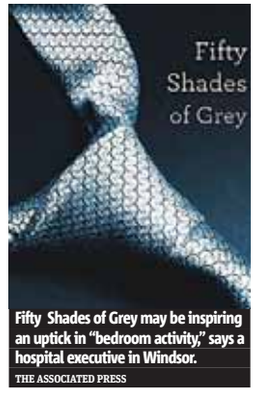
In the past week, Windsor Regional Hospital has delivered 80 babies, a 30 per cent spike over the average.

What's to blame for the sudden baby boom? One hospital executive says it's the popular novel Fifty Shades of Grey.

"The timing is suspiciously close," says David Musyj, president and CEO of WRH in Windsor, Ont.

The erotic novel, by British author E.L. James, was released in Canada at the beginning of 2012. It chronicles an intimate relationship between a college graduate and a business tycoon and garnered attention for its explicit sex scenes.

Although he hasn't read the book or any of its sequels, Musyj has been told the story "promotes increased levels of bedroom activity."



Fifty Shades of Grey may be inspiring an uptick in "bedroom activity," says a hospital executive in Windsor. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Musyj admits his conclusion is "unscientific," but says there is often a correlation between certain events and spikes in the birth rate. The 2003 blackout led to an increase in births, and a similar pattern occurs after a new collective agreement is negotiated with any of the big three automakers, Musyj said.

In the case of the recent spike, Musyj says the popularity of the Fifty Shades series is the only thing hospital staff could point to as a cause.

"It's not like Windsor had a cold winter," he said.

Man whose leg was crushed by crucifix sues

Amputated. New York man who prayed for wife's health in front of crucifix was hit while washing it

A Mexican immigrant was so elated over his wife's recovery from cancer that he offered to clean the large crucifix outside the New York state church where he spent many hours praying for her to beat the disease.

He was scrubbing grime off the 270-kilogram marble cross when it toppled onto him, crushing his right leg, which had to be amputated.

David Jimenez, 43, is now suing the Roman Catholic Church, and his $3-million US lawsuit is scheduled to go to trial next year.

Jimenez's lawyer, Kevin Kitson, said he filed the lawsuit in March 2011 after the church denied it was liable for the 2010 accident that resulted in six-figure medical bills for Jimenez. The bills were paid by charitable foundations, Kitson said.

The attorney described the Jimenez family as devout Catholics who immigrated to the United States nearly 20 years ago.

During his delivery jobs, Jimenez would pull into the parking lot at St. Patrick's Church in the city of Newburgh to pray before the outdoor crucifix for his wife, who was diagnosed with ovarian cancer in 2008.

Quoted

"He attributed her recovery to his devotion to the cross and Christ hearing his prayers."

Kevin Kitson,
David Jimenez's lawyer

After she was declared cancer-free, a grateful Jimenez offered to clean the crucifix.

While holding onto the cross beam for balance while scrubbing Jesus's face, the crucifix snapped off at its base, sending Jimenez crashing to the ground, Kitson said. The bulk of it landed on Jimenez's right leg, crushing it.

Kitson said a single screw was holding the heavy crucifix to its base.

"There was no anchoring system, just that one screw," he said.

The church raised more than $7,000 US for Jimenez and his family, but Kitson said his client has been unable to work since the accident.

Frank Raia, a lawyer representing the church, wouldn't discuss the case. The church is part of the Archdiocese of New York, which isn't named as a defendant, Raia said.

Guatemala quake kills dozens

Central America.
Temblor is the strongest to hit the country since a 1976 quake that killed 23,000

A 7.4-magnitude earthquake rocked Guatemala on Wednesday, killing at least 48 people in two provinces as it toppled thick adobe walls, shook huge landslides down onto highways, and sent terrified villagers streaming into the streets of San Marcos, an idyllic mountain town near the border with Mexico. One hundred people were missing, and hundreds more were injured.

The quake, which hit in the midst of the work day, caused terror over an unusually wide area, with damage reported in all but one of Guatemala's 22 states and shaking felt as far away as Mexico City.

San Marcos, where more than 30 homes collapsed, bore the brunt of the temblor's fury. More than 300 people, including firefighters, policemen and villagers, worked at a sand-extraction site to rescue seven people reported buried alive, including a six-year-old boy who had accompanied his grandfather to work.

"I want to see Giovanni! I want to see Giovanni!" the boy's mother, Francisca Ramirez, frantically cried. "He's not dead. Get him out."

President Otto Perez Molina said more than 2,000 soldiers were deployed from a base in San Marcos to help with disaster relief. A plane had already made two trips with special disaster-relief teams to the San Marcos area.

He asked that civilians in the country of 14 million stay put and not travel on highways because of landslides and debris. He also encouraged people in affected areas to stay outside and away from tall buildings.

David de Leon, spokesperson for civil protection, told radio station Emisoras Unidas that officials were working on evacuations and disaster relief. There were four strong aftershocks by late afternoon.

Name that online bully and ban anonymity: MP

Cyberbullying. It's a life-and-death issue for some kids and many people want to do something to stop it. But what will work?

JESSICA SMITH
Metro in Toronto

After reading some vile, anonymous online comments, Conservative MP Dean Del Mastro has decided the government should consider ending people's ability to post anonymously on the Internet.

"One of the best ways to end online and electronic bullying, libel and slander would be to force people posting hurtful comments to properly identify themselves," he posted on his Facebook page on Oct. 25.

He brought the same message to the House of Commons when he suggested banning anonymity wouldn't get in the way of free speech.

"While I believe firmly that the right to free speech must be strongly defended and protected, I also believe it should be backed up by the common decency to stand by one's words as opposed to hiding behind online anonymity," he said.

Del Mastro declined Metro's request for an interview on the issue, so it is unclear what specific actions he thinks the government should take or how banning Internet anonymity could be enforced.

Nathalie Des Rosiers, a lawyer with the Canadian Civil Liberties Association, says judges would strike down a law that prohibits anonymity online.

"It's difficult to imagine how we can protect freedom of expression without protecting some form of anonymity with websites and comments online," she said. "It's essential to recognize that good intentions of having people stand by their words chill and prevent many useful expressions that cannot be done publicly."

People choose to be anonymous online for many constructive reasons, she said. They include being a whistleblower, reporting incidents of bullying or just having a social or political conversation that they would not want their families, friends or employers to know about.

"In my view, the real answer to vitriolic, terrible, nasty comments on the web is not to engage with them," she said. "The people who do vitriolic things — their greatest reward is when we respond and give them an additional platform."

Des Rosiers suggests teaching kids to be "resilient" against bullying would help them in a way that wouldn't deprive them of their rights.

Del Mastro isn't the only politician talking about bullying. The NDP is asking for the federal government to strike an all-party committee to create a National Anti-Bullying Strategy. MP Dany Morin said the idea would be to consider the best means of combating bullying and then create a plan. But at this point he is unwilling to get into specifics about what the strategy might contain.

A senate committee is studying cyberbullying, but the report, originally scheduled for release in October, has been delayed.

'Caustic scourge'

"I read the comments of hundreds of anonymous posters online and was frankly shocked by the level of vitriolic hatred and personal attacks that were freely posted. Anonymous online attacks are, in my view, cowardly but they are no less hurtful and represent a caustic scourge that is harming too many in our society."
MP Dean Del Mastro

Intervention is key

Teach kids not to stand by: Expert

Dr. Claire Crooks CONTRIBUTED

There's no quick fix to stop bullying, but appealing to kids' empathy and urging them not to stand passively by is a good start, says a researcher on the subject.

Dr. Claire Crooks, who studies bullying at the University of Windsor and Toronto's CAMH Centre for Prevention Science, says depriving bullies of their audience is key. Most bullying occurs in front of peers and is committed by kids looking for attention. They also do it to make people laugh, which makes them feel powerful. Young bystanders who stand up to bullies or report bullying to adults are an effective deterrent, she says.

"Research is finding that kids who intervene in bullying are more likely to say their parents expect them to do that," she said. "So, just by talking to your children about what you expect them to do when someone else is getting picked on, that can have an impact."

It's more difficult to understand the role of the online bystander.

"It's easier for kids to cyberbully than bully because there's that anonymity," she said. "One thing's becoming clear — with cyberbullying, there really needs to be a joint response with parents, communities and police. So many of these cases are crossing the line into cybercrime."

JESSICA SMITH/METRO IN TORONTO

Engaging with kids

"The question parents need to be asking is not just how do I know if my kid's being bullied, it's how do I know if my child is involved in bullying? How do I know what role my child plays when others are being bullied? Those are the kinds of conversations we should be having with our children."
Dr. Claire Crooks

Rights and responsibilities

Privacy not a shield from the law

The right to privacy doesn't extend to anonymous bullies, Ontario's privacy commissioner says.

"Obviously, I'm a great believer in privacy — I'm the privacy commissioner — but I think you forfeit your right to privacy when you go online to victimize someone else," Ann Cavoukian said. "Privacy isn't there to enable you to do unacceptable behaviour that is harmful to others."

Cavoukian urges parents, teachers and students to discuss bullying publicly, while respecting the privacy rights of the victim. For example, teachers can help deter bullying by publicizing incidents and the consequences perpetrators face, but refrain from naming the bullies and victims.

She believes police have all the laws they need to police bullying when it becomes criminal and trace anonymous cyberbullies.

Targeting cybercrime

Give us more disclosure: RCMP officer

Tad Milmine CONTRIBUTED

On his days off, RCMP Const. Tad Milmine of Surrey, B.C., talks to small groups of students about bullying. On the job, he'd like to have more power to uncover cybercriminals more quickly.

"I'm not saying divulge everyone's personal information — I'm far too busy to just be nosy — but if I need to know information because somebody's receiving a death threat through the computer, to get a warrant for that or a production order for that, it takes a long time," he said.

Milmine, and many police services, support a Conservative bill that would make Internet service providers disclose a user's name and information to police without a warrant.

Some companies already do, Milmine says.

"Facebook is our best friend when it comes to investigations," he said. "If there's something serious, or imminent danger to a youth, Facebook will give us all the information within a day. They'll give us everything. There's no warrants, no production orders — they're terrific."

Students speak out

Look beyond laws to end bullying: Teens

Bill Belsey CONTRIBUTED

A group of students brought a message for Canadian politicians studying cyberbullying: Laws won't stop it.

Alberta teacher and anti-bullying activist Bill Belsey helped some of his students from Springbank Middle School speak to senators on a committee studying cyberbullying last spring. Most said kids their age need something more concrete.

"I just do not think that teenagers would listen. It just does not seem real enough," student Mariel Calvo said. "What I think we should do is get people speaking about it, get people aware, and make sure that everybody knows how it harms people, how it consumes your life completely."

Student Molly Turner said a law probably wouldn't have an effect right away, but could help make bullying less socially acceptable.

"For example, it is now illegal not to wear a seat belt, but, not so long ago, that was acceptable," she said. "If the government were to set up a very definite consequence for anyone breaking the law on cyberbullying, it may make it unacceptable in society. It would not solve everything and not right away, but it, along with other measures, might help."

A ‘noogie’ never hurt me: Vice mag founder

Long before teens posted nasty comments on their friends’ Facebook pages and adults took surreptitious photos of Walmart shoppers to post and mock on peopleofwalmart.com, there was Vice magazine. It pioneered the art of matching photos of regular people with cutting comments.

Gavin McInnes, a founder of Vice who cut ties with the magazine in 2008, created the infamous Dos and Don’ts in early ’90s Montreal. A bully by today’s standards, he argues that bullying — especially the old-fashioned noogie and purple nurple — is good for children.

Dos and Don’ts were photos taken of people out in public — knowingly or unknowingly — paired with humorous insults or lecherous and offensive compliments. It began when Vice was based in Montreal and continued as a staple of the magazine when its founders moved it to Brooklyn and found worldwide success.

“But now, with Instagram and all that, the whole thing has become moot. Everyone is a Dos and Don’ter,” McInnes said.

He says bullying has changed over time.

“When I was a kid, bullies weren’t necessarily a bad thing,” he said. “You got a wedgie. No one wore glasses when I was in school because you’d be a ‘four-eyes.’ Now, all kids have glasses.”

McInnes says legal attempts to stop cyberbullying won’t help children. High-profile cases of kids who kill themselves after they’ve been bullied are not enough to prove a crisis, he said.

“To cling to that I’m sure sells papers and makes people feel special and makes people feel that they’re righteous, but the mathematical truth of it is it’s not a major problem and the worst thing you could do would be to try to fix this fake problem by regulating people. Sorry, someone called you fat. Sorry, you were bullied online. That’s called high school.”

McInnes fondly recalls his childhood, when he says bullies were respected as tough guys that you’d want to be, and kids were tough enough to ride their bikes barefoot until their soles were like leather.

“Every kid had a cast on, we wouldn’t wear a helmet, we didn’t have car seats, and then you go into the real world and you can fight and survive,” he said. “Now we have fat kids, sitting inside where it’s safe, playing video games, being regulated to extinction.

“You do a lot more disservice to a child when you make him scared of the world and when you put him in a protective bubble where it’s illegal for anyone to be mean to him. Mean is good, because the world is cruel.”

JESSICA SMITH/METRO IN TORONTO

Point and laugh

- Gavin McInnes recalls the first negative reaction he got from a Dos and Don’ts entry. It came from a woman whose shirt he said made her look like she had “penis tits.” She was mad and expected him to care, he said. “I guess people actually aren’t used to being antagonized, but that’s the secret to being funny.”

Anti-bullying: A cause célèbre

Anti-bullying has become a rallying point for celebrities who have been bullied themselves.

• Lady Gaga, who set up the Born This Way Foundation to fight bullying, said in the documentary Inside the Outside:

“The boys picked me up and threw me in the trash can on the street on the corner of my block, while all the other girls from the school were leaving and could see me in the trash and everybody was laughing — and I was even laughing ... And I remember even one of the girls looking at me like, ‘Are you about to cry? You’re pathetic.’”

• Possibly the most bullied teen in America, Rebecca Black, singer of the YouTube hit Friday, went on to become an anti-bullying spokesperson. She said in a press release for the PACER’s National Bullying Prevention Center:

“Bullying is something that affects so many and it can happen to anyone. I know what it’s like to have people make fun of you, and I know how much it can hurt. I just don’t want other kids to have to go through that.”

• Demi Lovato, an anti-bullying spokesperson with the Mean Stinks Campaign, told ABC News:

“I literally didn’t know why they were being so mean to me. And when I would ask them why, they would just say, ‘Well, you’re fat.’ I was bullied because I was fat. And then a few months later I developed an eating disorder, and that’s kind of what I’ve been dealing with ever since.”

Next hurdle: The C-word

Compromise. It's said to be key to Obama's success in second term because GOP still holds tight grip on House of Representatives

He won. But now what's in store for Barack Obama?

A brutal ideological fight, for one thing.

Obama told Americans he has never been so optimistic. "The best is yet to come," he said, ticking off goals of reforming the tax system, easing climate change and overhauling immigration laws.

"Not so fast, Mr. President," came the response from Republicans, who still hold their grip on the House of Representatives.

So the challenge for Obama is mastering the C-word: compromise.

"The voters have not endorsed the failures or excesses of the president's first term," said frosty Republican Sen. Mitch McConnell.

"Now it's time for the president to propose solutions that actually have a chance of passing the Republican-controlled House."

Obama's narrow lead in the popular vote will make it difficult for him to claim a sweeping mandate.

With returns from 94 per cent of the nation's precincts, Obama had 58 million, or 50 per cent of the popular vote.

Challenger Mitt Romney had 56 million, or 48 per cent.

Romney tried to set a more conciliatory tone. "At a time like this, we can't risk partisan bickering," he said.

What now for the Republicans?

The party is at a crossroads, confronted with an evolving U.S. electorate that is unceremoniously rejecting its vision for the country.

The economy. Obama's next challenge is pulling back from the fiscal cliff

Can Barack Obama put the U.S. fiscal house in order — and help the global recovery?

"There will be a period of unease as we now turn from the politicking to the heavy lifting," said Paul Taylor, chief investment officer of BMO Asset Management Inc.

Some Canadians warn the U.S. is heading toward the so-called fiscal cliff, which would be reached if gridlock in Washington prevents a deal to extend about $600 billion US in tax cuts and spending beyond Dec. 31.

Canadian exporters will still face uncertainty over the U.S. economy, which has had an impact on Canadian manufacturing and forestry firms contending with a decline in U.S. housing.

"If you're a Canadian exporter outside the energy sector then your options aren't great," said Capital Economics' chief U.S. economist, Paul Ashworth.

But NBC News anchor Brian Williams said Trump's tweets show he has "driven well past the last exit to relevance and veered into something closer to irresponsible."

Romney supporter Ted Nugent ranted on Twitter that the country is doomed. "Pimps whores & welfare brats & their soulless supporters hav a president to destroy America," he wrote.

World is his oyster

International reaction. 'Phew' spells relief in any language as many nations hail U.S. president's second term

He won, and the word "phew" trended worldwide on Twitter.

Despite a hard-fought campaign in the United States, there was never any contest overseas — President Barack Obama is the world's choice.

Even Tom McGrath, president of Republicans Abroad France, conceded: "It's clear that if they could vote, Europe would vote 80 per cent for Obama."

Part of the reason is continuity. Challenger Mitt Romney is a little-known figure internationally with scant foreign-policy experience, while Obama was seen as a steady hand.

"I think it is good that Obama won," said Pawel Kukiela, a 30-year-old consultant in Poland. "He has a good program and I think it will be much better for Obama to continue what he has started."

An Iraqi army officer in the capital, Baghdad, praised Obama for withdrawing U.S. troops from Iraq and planning to do the same in Afghanistan.

Obama's re-election "is in line with what the Chinese people want," said Hong Zihan, a graduate student watching the results at a U.S. Embassy event in Beijing.

In Myanmar, which is opening to the world after five decades of isolating military rule, some said they were relieved Obama was re-elected because he had chosen to engage rather than sanction their country.

"President Obama is very flexible," said Thit Oo, a 42-year-old car mechanic, "and international relations have improved during his term."

Finance Minister Jim Flaherty is urging U.S. politicians to get back to work quickly on resolving their budget crisis now the election is over.

Failure, he warns, will plunge both America and Canada into recession.

Flaherty has voiced concern before about the so-called "fiscal cliff," but the re-election of President Barack Obama and a right-wing Republican House on Tuesday has led to new fears of the risk becoming reality.

"Of course we're worried because it would mean, were the entire fiscal cliff risk to come to reality ... (it) would put the U.S. economy into a recession quite quickly, and the Canadian economy would follow shortly thereafter, and would have a significant effect on the global economy," Flaherty said Wednesday.

Coastal residents of New York and New Jersey faced new warnings to evacuate their homes, and airlines cancelled hundreds of flights, as a new storm arrived Wednesday, more than a week after Superstorm Sandy left dozens dead and millions without power.

Forecasters said the latest storm appeared weaker than first thought, but it still carried the threat of high winds, storm surges and even snow that could cause further damage to the already weakened infrastructure of the country's most densely populated region. Rain and wet snow started falling in New York City around midday.

"I am waiting for the locusts and pestilence next," New Jersey Gov. Chris Christie said. Public works crews with heavy machinery worked to build up dunes to protect the battered shoreline.

More than half a million homes and businesses remained without power as temperatures hit freezing at night, and finding tens of thousands of people emergency housing — in some cases, for the long term — was the greatest challenge.

New York Mayor Michael Bloomberg ordered police to use loudspeakers to warn vulnerable residents, many of them in low-income public housing, about evacuating.

U.K. plans direct talks with Syrian rebels as violence escalates

Damascus clashes. U.K. PM Cameron says Obama win is an opportunity to do more to stop ongoing conflict in war-torn Syria

Syrian rebels made a new push into Damascus on Wednesday, clashing heavily with troops in the rebellious suburbs of the capital and firing mortars at a presidential palace and a Palestinian refugee camp, activists said.

The regime stronghold of Damascus has seen a surge in violence this week with some of the fiercest clashes in months. In recent days, opposition fighters also stepped up assaults on high-ranking supporters of President Bashar Assad in the capital.

The rebels also have been trying to break the resistance of a pro-government Palestinian faction, which could drag the half-million Palestinian refugees in Syria into the civil war.

The new challenge from rebels in the capital comes as the U.S. and Britain take steps to bolster the fragmented Syrian opposition. British Prime Minister David Cameron said his government planned to change its policy and deal directly with opposition military leaders. Previously, Britain has had contacts only with exile groups and political opposition figures inside Syria.

He urged newly re-elected U.S. President Barack Obama to join the Britain in opening direct talks with rebel fighters, and said they must do more to end the civil war that has killed more than 36,000, according to activists' tallies.

Rebels fired several mortar rounds at the Syrian president's residence in central Damascus on Wednesday morning but failed to hit their mark, said Bassam al-Dada, an adviser to the commander of the Free Syrian Army.

Syria. Western efforts to push out Assad ramp up in wake of U.S. election

Western efforts to oust Syrian President Bashar Assad shifted dramatically Wednesday, with Britain announcing it will deal directly with rebel military leaders. A Turkish official also said his nation has held discussions with NATO allies, including the United States, on using Patriot missiles to protect a safe zone inside Syria.

The developments came within hours of President Barack Obama's re-election. U.S. allies anticipate a new, bolder approach from the American leader to end the deadlocked civil war that has killed thousands of people since an uprising against Assad began in March 2011.

U.S. officials said Patriots or other assets could be deployed to Turkey's side of the border for defensive purposes against possible incursions, mortar strikes and the like.

But Washington isn't prepared to send any such equipment inside Syria, which would amount to a violation of sovereignty and a significant military escalation, said the officials, who spoke on condition of anonymity because they weren't authorized to speak publicly on the matter.

Microsoft nixes Windows Live Messenger

Microsoft is dropping its instant-messaging program and forcing most users to switch to Skype. Maintaining Windows Live Messenger made less sense after Microsoft Corp. bought Skype for $8.5 billion US last year.

A new version of Skype released a few weeks ago allows users to sign in with a Microsoft account. By merging the two services, people won't have to maintain two separate contact lists.

Microsoft says that Messenger users who switch to Skype will get benefits such as the ability to call landline and mobile phones and better support on mobile devices.

Except for mainland China, Messenger will be discontinued worldwide after the first quarter of 2013. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

If you stick to solid businesses that perform well in any economic environment, says columnist Bryan Borzykowski, your portfolio will eventually rise. ISTOCK

It won't come as a surprise to know that it's pretty difficult to predict where the stock market is headed. If we knew what would happen, we all would have sold our tech stocks in 2000; we would have exited the market in mid-2008; and we would have all jumped back in March 2009.

While bad economic news out of Europe does negatively impact markets, and while investors are worried about America's fiscal issues, it's foolish for the average person to make bets based on what may or may not happen in the world.

The only way to really "play" the market is by investing in reliable, revenue-generating companies for the long-term.

What makes a company reliable? Typically, the best companies to own are in sectors that are impervious to an economic downturn. Food companies, for instance, do well in downturns because people always need to eat. Telecoms outperform too — no one wants to give up their Internet.

Dividend paying companies have also been proven to be less volatile than non-yielding companies. The dividend — a payout by the company to shareholders — is often a focusing force for executives. They need to be prudent with their company's money; if they're not, and the dividend gets cut, investors will want to sell.

Large, multinational brand name companies do well over the long-term too. Their size make it less likely that they'll go bankrupt; their international footprint means they have multiple avenues for growth and their brand name will keep people coming back for more. Think McDonald's, Coke and Procter & Gamble.

Whether you pick stocks or invest in mutual funds, these types of "blue chip" stocks should form the basis of most people's portfolios. Some investors, though, may want to boost returns by buying what's called "growth" stocks. These are often small companies — with a market capitalization of under $1 billion — they're in cyclical sectors that outperform during boom times and they're companies with incredible growth. They are more volatile than blue chips, but, as the famous investing adage goes, risk equals reward.

It's actually a good idea to hold both. Large-cap stocks tend to appreciate slowly, though the dividend will help boost returns, while the share prices of small-caps can increase quickly. A combination should give you some growth without putting your entire portfolio at risk.

Whatever you choose to buy, make sure you're purchasing a company that isn't going to implode in the short-term.

So do your due diligence. Read what's on Morningstar.com — a popular investing website that analyzes stocks, mutual funds and exchange-traded funds — seek out analyst reports and comb through financial reports.

If you don't have the time, talk to an adviser or buy a mutual fund, where the managers pick the stocks for you.

Ask any expert and they'll tell you not to try and time the market. If you stick to solid businesses that will perform well in any economic environment, then your portfolio will eventually rise.

Terminology

Know your numbers

If you're checking out a potential buy online, here are three numbers to look out for.

P/E: A company's price-to-earnings ratio tells people how much an investor is willing to pay per dollar of earnings. Very generally, a P/E ratio lower than the market P/E means a stock is cheap; if the metric is above, the company may be expensive.

Dividend Yield: This number tells you how much money the company is giving back to shareholders. It often has two numbers next to it — the first is the dividend per share, the second is the annual yield.

Price: The share price is, of course, important, but it shouldn't drive your investment decision. Apple costs $576, but it's trading at a cheap 13 times P/E. Look at the share price, then look at metrics such P/E to determine if the company is worth buying.

Confidential settlement

Deal reached in Canada Goose trademark case

A clothing retailer has settled a trademark-infringement lawsuit with Canada Goose over its distinctive parkas. Canada Goose sued International Clothiers Inc. earlier this year, accusing it of making shoddy replicas.

The well-known outerwear manufacturer alleged International Clothiers had intentionally designed a logo and positioned it on jackets to mimic the Canada Goose Arctic Program trademark. The matter was settled Tuesday, but the terms of the settlement are confidential. THE CANADIAN PRESS

'Pay to pay.' NDP wants to outlaw paper-bill charges

Making people "pay to pay" is unfair and needs to be stopped, the federal Opposition said Wednesday, urging the Harper government to ban companies from charging fees for sending monthly bills by mail.

A number of telephone, Internet and other firms have recently begun charging customers fees if they want paper bills delivered.

"Making folks pay to pay," is a cash cow that needs to be put down, said New Democrat MP Andrew Cash.

"It isn't as though these companies are offering a new service for this," Cash told a news conference. "This is a new fee for an old service. It isn't fair."

Bell, as an example, says it charges $2 to offset the costs of producing and mailing a printed bill. There is no charge for getting a bill over the Internet.

Rogers Inc. also charges a $2 fee, but says it directs the money it collects to the Rogers Youth Fund. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Unfair fees

- NDP MP Andrew Cash says the "pay-to-pay" fees unfairly target seniors and families already struggling to pay their bills, as well as those who do not have regular access to the Internet or don't like paying bills online.

MEMO: ETIQUETTE AMENDMENTS

HE SAYS...
John Mazerolle
metronews.ca

The following changes are being implemented immediately. Please make a note of it.

- Effective without delay, you must wait for all departing passengers to get off transportation before you are allowed on it. For example, if there is a woman in her 80s attempting to leave a bus, you may no longer crowd on board as if it is the last ship leaving Krypton. Under the new guidelines, doing so makes you a jackass. If there is more than one person attempting to push on at the same time, this DOES NOT divide the jackassery between you. You each remain at Full Jackass. Thank you for your understanding.
- On Internet forums, you may no longer comment on crime or privacy issues with, "What have they got to hide?" or a similar variant when you write under a pseudonym such as SEXYGUY76. We apologize for any inconvenience.
- If you are walking down the sidewalk and refuse to give up an inch of shoulder territory to oncoming pedestrians, you will no longer be considered King of the Sidewalk, no matter how confident your strut. We take no responsibility for loss of ego that may result.
- Hitler may not be mentioned underneath any online political article unless Hitler is the subject of the article. Even then, give it a rest.
- Sitting on the outside of two empty bus seats and then not moving at all when somebody tries to sit on the inside seat, makes you worse than, uh ... Mussolini.
- Effective immediately, all strippers and bartenders are not into you, and are instead faking it because it's their job. Unless you're really, really sure, in which case you're the exception, loverboy.
- In person, you may no longer say any of the following: "We dialogued," "Besties," "Random!" and "Cold enough for ya?" Going forward, you may not use "Going forward."
- If attending televised golf, you may not shout, "Get in the hole!" after every putt, or I will find you and hurt you.
- You may not shove fatty, over-salted food into your gob and then go all Dr. Strangelove when you are offered a flu shot.
- No whistling of any sort. Ever.
- Yelling out the title of each song at a rock concert after a few notes is no longer amazing. It is now very annoying and will make you hated by everyone, including your future grandchildren.
- Please be informed that taking out your smartphone at live theatre makes you a horrible person, retroactive to when smartphones were invented. If you have any concerns, our representatives will be happy to show you many creative ways to conceal your phone.

This concludes the list of changes.

You may have noticed most of the new rules only apply to jerks and fools. If you are neither jerk nor fool, please carry on as before. The only rule for nice, smart people is to chill out about kale. It's just cabbage, for God's sake.

Thank you for your time and consideration in these matters.

If attending televised golf, you may not shout, "Get in the hole!" after every putt, or I will find you and hurt you. Sincerely, John Mazerolle. GETTY IMAGES

Climbers hang in sync on peak

A team of climbers created this display by symmetrically scaling this needle-like mountain. The crew of 28, from across Europe, travelled to Italy to take on the daunting Ago del Torrone, known as Cleopatra's Needle.

But instead of waiting until they all reached the vertiginous peak, they paused while in perfect symmetry. METRO

Aim was 'something very strange'

For mountaineer and photo organizer Robert Boesch, inspiration came from simply "trying to do something new, something very strange."

"For some time now, I have concentrated on taking photos of climbers in unusual positions on rock faces," he said.

"It makes the photo truly striking and memorable — that's what I wanted." METRO

Former Dragon rethinks his definition of success

New book. W. Brett Wilson's tale serves as a warning for those who want to follow in his wealthy footsteps

BACKSTAGE PASS
Lisa Wilton
calgary@metronews.ca

He's one of Calgary's most successful entrepreneurs and well-known philanthropists.

But W. Brett Wilson admits his outstanding financial success came at a high cost, and hopes his new book will serve as both a cautionary tale and an inspiration to those who want to follow in his footsteps.

"I'm trying to draw attention to the pitfalls (of chasing wealth) and allowing them to observe that the costs of their decisions can be very high," says the former Dragons' Den star, who released Redefining Success: Still Making Mistakes earlier this week.

"An easy excuse for overtime is, 'I'm doing it for my family.' But ultimately, it's your family who doesn't want you to work that extra hour … We need to redefine success. Happiness is a pretty big measure of it."

In Redefining Success, Wilson shares his thoughts on everything from the lack of ethics on Wall Street, his experience building up his investment banking business, First Calgary Financial, to his divorce and bouts with depression and colon cancer.

"It's not a business book, it's not a self-help book, it's not an autobiography," he says.

"I'm not sure where it belongs in the book store. Fortunately, there are four other Dragon books out there, so they can put it next to those and away it goes."

Although Wilson has told many of the personal stories on stage before, he says it was more challenging to commit them to paper.

"It seem easier to share them from the podium," he says.

"People will leave and they've got a memory of the show, but now they have a black and white of the story."

Wilson hired a ghostwriter when he first embarked on the project more than a year ago, but was disappointed in the result.

"It wasn't what I wanted to say," he recalls. "It wasn't in my voice. So I had another ghostwriter try to rework into something more palpable.

"Then I took those 40,000 words and rewrote them again. There isn't one sentence I haven't touched."

Barry Levinson, director of such modern American classics as Diner, The Natural and Rain Man, makes a surprising venture into the horror realm this week with The Bay, an unnerving fright fest about a coastal July 4 celebration that goes horribly wrong. Since this is such a departure for Levinson, we were curious to find out what his five favourite horror movies were. He was nice enough to take the time to answer in his own words:

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

5 Horror favourites

1 The Exorcist (1973)

The eternal Exorcist. ALL PHOTOS HANDOUT

The Exorcist has some gutsy filmmaking. If you go back and watch it, pretty much nothing scary happens for the first 45 minutes. It's just slowly building tension. Then the daughter comes downstairs in the middle of her mother's Georgetown cocktail party and urinates on the carpet in front of all the guests. It's an incredible moment and the movie just goes from there. It's not trying to have fun with the horror like a lot of the films of today. It suggests that this very well could have happened.

2 Frankenstein (1931)

Don't think you can overlook the original Frankenstein. Great design for a monster. Classical form. And one of the great understated scenes of tension when the monster comes upon a very young girl. She accepts him without question. And we just wait for something terrible to happen.

3 Diabolique (1955)

The 1950s French film directed by Henri-Georges Clouzot. As far as I know, no one was doing horror/thriller with as much originality as this film at the time. The story takes place at a boarding school in the French countryside where a schoolmaster's wife and his mistress conspire to kill him. When they do, the body disappears and a series of strange and disturbing events occur. This film has some fantastic imagery and incredible psychological tension.

4 Psycho (1960)

Again, all the great horror movies remain great because they did something outside the box. Killing a movie star as big as Janet Leigh was unheard of. Nobody did that. And to do it in the shower like that. It has now become an iconic moment. I actually made a good deal of fun of it in High Anxiety, but I remember my mouth kind of dropping when I saw it. I heard Hitchcock tried to grab the rights to Diabolique and lost out to Henri-Georges Clouzot. In turn, he made Psycho a few years later and used some of the great imagery Diabolique used with water, bathrooms, death.

5 Let The Right One In (2008)

I don't know if I would label this one strictly horror, but it certainly is terrifying. And touching. Tomas Alfredson is one of the many talented directors coming out of Sweden right now and this one works so well because it's as interested in character as it is in horrifying moments and imagery. Shot against a cold, icy landscape, it's as much a love story between the two children as it is a vampire film.

Life of Pi. Director Ang Lee talks about task of keeping art house film mainstream

Oscar-winning director Ang Lee said Wednesday that he worked hard during the four-year shooting of Yann Martel's Life of Pi to give the $100 million art house film appeal for general audiences.

The movie stars Indian Suraj Sharma, who plays a boy who drifts on the open sea with a Bengal tiger and a hyena after a ship carrying the rest of his family sinks.

"As an art house film, you can explore the philosophical issues," Lee said at a news conference. "But for a popular film, we also need to make the audience feel touched and that was the difficult part."

Lee said initial reaction to the film had been positive, leaving him to conclude that his "risky experiment" would be a success. A major problem in the filming, Lee said, was coping with animals on a roiling sea, a problem Lee solved by filming in 3D. "As a new technology, 3D gives the film additional appeal," he said.

Much of the film was shot in Taiwan, Lee's home. He said that one of the key settings — a large water tank built at a studio in the central city of Taichung — allowed the 150-strong foreign crew to use its imagination freely and not be restrained by traditional Hollywood production values. "I was relieved that they enjoyed their work in Taiwan. We couldn't have made the film if it were not here because of all the help we received," Lee said. The film will premiere in the U.S. on Nov. 21.

Is scene in new Lincoln biopic a subtle nod to the man's sexuality?

Lincoln. Set in 1865, the great U.S. president shares an ambiguous moment with an aide as he stresses over his duties

NED EHRBAR
Metro World News in Hollywoood

Late in Steven Spielberg's Lincoln, when Honest Abe (as played by Daniel Day-Lewis) is wrestling with the decision to press ahead on getting the 13th Amendment passed, he pays a late-night visit to the sleeping quarters of John Hay, a young aide (played by Joseph Cross).

There's much affectionate thigh-patting and hair-tousling. In the scene, Hay asked if Lincoln would like any "company" that night. Which got us to wondering: Was that scene meant to be seen as a subtle nod to the wide-ranging theories about Lincoln's personal life?

"You mean was he gay?" screenwriter Tony Kushner offers back with a grin. "I think there's a great deal of reason in the historical record to wonder. There's absolutely nothing definitive," he says.

"Given the number of people in Lincoln's very empyrean realm who were probably or definitely bisexual at least — Michelangelo, Shakespeare, et cetera — I'd say there might be some theory that one could generate that people who really are dealing in that realm aren't as limited by categories as the rest of us. And I think there is some evidence. I mean, Carl Sandburg said it in 1930. There are spots of lavender in Lincoln's early life, is the way he put it."

Sally Field, for her part, is rather particular of Mr. Lincoln, probably because she spent so long playing his wife, Mary Todd Lincoln. "I say no he wasn't," she says with a laugh. On a more serious note, she explains that back then, "men were so much more open with their affection for each other. Their letters to each other were, you know, 'My darling, I miss you.' They were extraordinary. 'I long to be in your presence.' And in today's homophobic world, you immediately go to that's where they are. Whether that's where they were or whether they dabbled, who knew?"

As far as Kushner — who won a Pulitzer Prize for the AIDS drama Angels in America — is concerned, this film isn't trying to say one way or the other. "I think that it's a mistake for historians to err on either side," Kushner explains. "I don't think we should jump into certainty where there is no certainty, but I also think historians should not say, as some have, he absolutely wasn't gay or bisexual. We don't know, and we will never know unless somebody discovers something lying around. So the question is for me, as Sally just said so eloquently at the Human Rights Campaign dinner, so what? Who cares who he wanted to sleep with? He was Abraham Lincoln, a great president."

One thing is for sure though, and that's that during the heated political action of the movie, Lincoln certainly wasn't getting frisky with anyone, male or female. "In 1865, I feel comfortable in saying in January he wasn't getting laid by anybody," Kushner says. "He was very busy the whole time."

Sure, but what about the scene in question? Even if the movie doesn't want to say definitively one way or the other if Lincoln was gay, was that late-night confab meant to be a nod to the theories about the sexuality of the 16th president? Yes, Kushner later confides to Metro. "You're exactly right."

Ne-Yo paints town R.E.D. to celebrate his musical blessing

Busy man. New album finds the R&B stalwart in reflective and thankful mood and saying it's his most well balanced project yet

G VALENTINO BALL
scene@metronews.ca

In the time since his last album, Ne-Yo has become a father for the second time, hit the big screen with a role in the George Lucas-directed Red Tails and recently took on the job of senior vice president of artists and repertoire at a little company known as Universal Motown (a job that music legend Smokey Robinson once held).

But even with a full plate, he says he is focused on making sure his newly released set R.E.D. — which stands for Realizing Every Dream is a success. He sounds quite content as he speaks about how art imitates life with the new album's title.

"I started setting a lot of dreams and aspirations for myself," he says about his childhood. "I wanted to win Grammys. I wanted the respect and appreciation of my peers. I wanted to travel the world behind my music and provide for my family. I can honestly say that from (the age of) nine until now at 33 years old, just about every dream I set for myself has been realized through music. This album is a celebration of that blessing."

On what he calls the most well-balanced project of his career, R.E.D. is split between R&B and dance tracks in an effort to satisfy his entire fan base. The result is an album equally as useful in the bedroom as it is in the club.

The singer/songwriter has been outspoken about the lack of passion in today's R&B. Yet even with his criticism, he is quickly able to point to a few artists that get him going.

"I love what Frank Ocean is doing with the R&B right now," he says. "He definitely has a different take on it. That's a good step in the right direction. I love what Miguel is doing."

Ne-Yo also admits that the criticism he offered to Trey Songz was premature.

"I had made some comments about Trey that I have to retract and apologize to him. I hadn't listened to Chapter V yet," he says of Songz's latest work. "He is putting the passion back in it. His performance is definitely there. There are steps (being made) to getting (R&B) back there. We just have to keep it going."

With his new role at Motown, Ne-Yo hopes to be able to do just that. He also says he likes the idea of being a part of history.

"I'd like to be instrumental in the revitalization of Motown," he says, "and more importantly ... I'd like to be able to take the knowledge that I have acquired and be able to pass it down."

Quoted

Humble roots

- Love of music. Ne-Yo says that although he enjoys performing, what has always been more important to him is that he actually has a song that's worth performing. "At nine I discovered the beauty of songwriting," he says. "I didn't know if I was going to be an artist. I didn't know if I was going to play an instrument but I knew it was going to be music."

Director explores online world with Audrey, part of female-centric channel

YouTube. Betty Thomas trumpets the benefits of working in a web-series as opposed to the perils of traditional TV

Kim Shaw as Audrey, left, and Arielle Kebbel as Marissa, star in Audrey. HANDOUT

Director Betty Thomas neatly sums up the benefits of making a low-budget online series: A lack of high-level meddling.

"There's no network saying, 'Oh, Betty, I'm not sure viewers will like that character if she picks that banana up,'" the Emmy-winning actress-turned-director said. Mention that the character enjoys fruit, she said, and the network comeback may be, "But what does a banana symbolize?"

The independence Thomas enjoyed making Audrey for the WIGS YouTube channel came with its own challenges, including limited resources for the half-dozen episodes that are seven to eight minutes long.

"You get whoever you can force to work for no money," she said.

She had the advantage of cajoling previous collaborators including Gary Cole, whom Thomas directed in the big-screen flick The Brady Bunch Movie (1995).

Audrey, about a woman whose great passion in life is food, also allowed for the discovery of relative newcomers Kim Shaw, who plays Audrey, and screenwriter Leah Rachel. New episodes debut Monday and Friday through Nov. 16.

Shaw "is so spectacular in the piece. She came out of nowhere for me but really works in ways I couldn't have imagined," Thomas said.

Rachel is "such a hip girl, with a voice I never heard before, certainly a voice I've never been able to direct before, a young, free voice."

Thomas, who won an Emmy for Hill Street Blues before turning to directing — with the 1997 Howard Stern film Private Parts among her credits — is equally enthused about the veterans behind WIGS.

Quoted

"There's no network saying, 'Oh, Betty, I'm not sure viewers will like that character if she picks that banana up.'"

Director Betty Thomas
Talking about the advantages of her show

Launched last March, WIGS is the brainchild of filmmakers Jon Avnet (Black Swan, Fried Green Tomatoes) and Rodrigo Garcia (Albert Nobbs, TV's In Treatment).

WIGS is an acronym for the channel's tagline, "Where it gets interesting."

The programming, including original series, short films and documentaries, features lead female characters and stories that the channel vows will be provocative and "addictive."

"Many people are doing web series, but not in the way Jon and Rodrigo are, being supportive of women ... It's an exciting place to be," Thomas said, adding, "It's crazy, it's hard," but it encourages creativity.

Some in the entertainment industry are reluctant to get involved in online projects because they don't see any profit potential, Thomas said. She believes that will change. "In the long run, there is going to be money in it." THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Nice girl warms to playing bad girl role

Interview. Krysten Ritter talks about why she thinks she is so good in her role on Don't Trust the B— in Apartment 23

Talking to Krysten Ritter, you quickly realize she's happy, bubbly and fun. So how did such a nice girl get cast as anything but on ABC's Don't Trust the B— in Apartment 23?

"Maybe that's why they picked me to do it," Ritter said in a recent interview.

She cites one of her favourite quotes by Bette Davis.

"Why am I so good at playing b—es? I think it's because I'm not a b—. Maybe that's why Joan Crawford always plays ladies."

On Don't Trust the B—, now in its second season (Tuesday), Ritter plays Chloe, a con artist who spends her time scheming to make an easy buck.

She shares a Manhattan apartment with a Midwesterner named June. At first Chloe just wants to scam June out of her money, but ends up softening to her.

"I think I bring lightness to (the role). I'm girly and I like to have a good time and joke around and I think that helps the character not just be evil. I think there's two different ways you can play this character. You could just be an evil, mean person or you could make it fun," the 30-year-old actress said.

On the show, Chloe's best friend is a fictionalized version of actor James Van Der Beek, played by Van Der Beek.

"I love him. I've loved getting to know him. We talk all the time. We spend every minute together when we're on set. Even when we're in our trailers. We talk on the phone. He's become like a great man in my life," she said.

Ritter appeared on Gilmore Girls and Veronica Mars, but is probably best known for her short-lived role as Aaron Paul's girlfriend on AMC's Breaking Bad who dies of a drug overdose.

"I did Breaking Bad thinking, 'No one will see this. I'll just do it because it's awesome.' And it's turned out to be like the biggest credit I have in my career."

Don't Trust the B— was introduced earlier this year as a midseason show.

"I did a Gossip Girl spin-off which was supposed to be this huge thing and it was not good and didn't work and it didn't get picked up. So I stopped thinking about results and I did the pilot for this and I loved it and I had a great time but ... I had no expectations."

HEIDI KLUM

Supermodel Heidi Klum will host of the upcoming MTV European Music Awards in Frankfurt this Sunday. We chat with her about the pressure of red carpet dressing and how she's prepping for her upcoming gig.

'I WEAR WHAT'S CURRENT, FUN AND TRENDY'

ROMINA McGUINNESS
scene@metronews.ca

What made you choose Versace for your wardrobe for the MTV EMAs?
A music awards show is very different from say, the Oscars. MTV is hip, young and fun. The Versace dresses I'll be wearing aren't glamorous gowns. They're short, hot and cool. Very rock and roll. When I saw what Donatella sent, I thought, "This is it!" Some of the pieces had to be made especially for me because the ones straight off the runway, don't always fit me. I'm not that thin.

Dressing up for an awards show must come with so much pressure! What are a few rules that you normally stick by in order to avoid bad photo-ops and worst dressed lists?
I'm not a very conservative person. I like to stay true to myself and stick to my instinct. When I fall in love with an outfit, I just go for it. I don't care what people are going to say.

When you look back on your awards show red carpet looks, are there any that you wish you could banish from the Internet forever?
No, even though people have put me on the worst dressed list a few times. I always think, "I liked the way I looked that day." Sometimes people go back 10 years and they're like, "Ha ha! Look what you were wearing!" Fashion changes. Maybe that hairdo and that kind of dress were really cool 10 years ago, but not today. I'm in fashion. I wear what's current, fun and trendy.

What was your favourite red carpet moment of all time?
I've worn so many great dresses so it's hard to pin it down to one. I've had Roberto Cavalli cut me out leather pants into super tiny shorts or there was this crazy lime green dress I wore with turquoise thigh-high boots. I've also gone to the Oscars with a beautiful red Galliano dress and a gigantic bun over my head.

What make-up items will you have on hand to get you through the night?
Blotting paper as I'll probably be sweating a lot with the lights. I don't like to over powder, it's too much. I'm a heavy lip licker when I get nervous and I keep licking my lipstick off. So I'll be applying lipgloss nonstop or wear a lip stain that just stays on.

What's the worst thing that could happen to you on live TV?
If my dress were to split open and I'd be standing there … butt naked — on live TV. That would be pretty embarrassing.

You'd think Klum might have second thoughts about this outfit. You'd be wrong.

Naomi's party for a billionaire

Naomi Campbell and boyfriend Vladimir Doronin. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Naomi Campbell is pulling out all the stops to celebrate the birthday of her boyfriend, Russian billionaire Vladimir Doronin, in the palaces of western India.

The supermodel's spokeswoman, Debi Zornes, says the celebration of Doronin's 50th birthday kicked off in the 15th century Mehrangarh Fort in the city of Jodhpur on Tuesday night. The festivities included fireworks, traditional music and dancing and an elaborate buffet meal.

Another party is slated for Wednesday evening at another medieval palace, Umaid Bhawan, which is now run as a hotel. All 42 rooms at the palace hotel have been booked for Campbell's guests. No other details were immediately available.

Lautner weighs in on the troubles of his co-stars

Since he's starred in all five Twilight films with Kristen Stewart and Robert Pattinson, it was only a matter of time before Taylor Lautner was asked to weigh in on Stewart's cheating scandal that broke this summer.

An interviewer for Cosmopolitan magazine got him to open up, though Lautner chose a very diplomatic route for his response.

"To be honest, I've never been involved in any of those situations, so I don't know if trust can be regained," he said.

"It would be just a guess and a shot in the dark, and I don't want to give that if I haven't even been there myself."

Stewart playing coy on relationship

Looking for official confirmation that Twilight stars Kristen Stewart and Robert Pattinson have really reconciled in the wake of her cheating scandal?

Well, the woman herself isn't being much help in that department. When asked during an interview on the Today show if she and Pattinson are back together, she says, "Funny you mention that. I'm going to just let people watch whatever little movie they think our lives are. Keep 'em guessing, I always say."

Interviewing Russell Brand, one tweet at a time

NED EHRBAR
Metro World News

I've arrived at a publicist's office in Hollywood to chat with British comedian Russell Brand purportedly about his participation in What About Dick? (whataboutdick.com), a radio play-style stage show written by Monty Python alum Eric Idle.

But Brand has never been known to stick to the topic at hand. He enters with a banana, singing, "And I get so doggone lonesome."

He sits down, peels open the banana and says, "Come on in, mate. What do you need to know?"

Follow our conversation over the next few days at twitter.com/russellsmusings.

Megan Fox and Brian Austin Green.

Brian Austin Green credits Witherspoon for his cover up

Brian Austin Green and Megan Fox managed to keep the birth of their son a secret for more than a month.

And he says all the credit goes to Reese Witherspoon, as the world was too busy cooing over her newborn to notice, he tells Ryan Seacrest during an interview.

"We got really lucky," he says. "And I've been wanting to send Reese Witherspoon flowers for, like, a month and a half. She actually gave birth, I think, the day before us in Santa Monica."

Cocktail trouser hour

The look. Cocktails needn't be the only thing in need of a shake and stir. See this season's glitzy trouser, which replaces the little black dress.

RICHARD PECKETT
life@metronews.ca

Trousers to a cocktail party? Here are a few reasons to give them a try: 1) Pants are more liberating and easier to dance in than a tiny little dress. 2) They're chic in a slightly unaffected, androgynous kind of way and 3) This season's flashy, embellished versions are bang on trend thanks to Stella McCartney, Jonathan Saunders, Miu Miu and a long list of others who worked the look into their autumn/winter collections. Go for a pair that is sufficiently showy. Think shiny metallics, textured brocade or trippy graphics. Wear them to the office with a button-down and blazer before changing into a festive top and skinny heels for night.

Fashion dictionary

- Brocade. A rich, intricate, jacquard-weaved fabric with a raised design, often in a gold or silver thread.
- Jacquard. A decorative weave created on a jacquard loom for damask and brocade fabrics.

Exploring the faux look of nature

DESIGN CENTRE
Karl Lohnes
home@metronews.ca

One of the hottest trends in decorating has natural elements incorporated in a room, like wood, stone and fur. A country or modern look can take on an authentic and relaxed feel with a few of these elements.

Natural elements help keep a room's colour scheme neutral, yet add texture and interest.

Here's a grouping of on-trend, natural-looking decor products with a twist.

You see, all of these hot decor times are faux. There's no fur, wood, stone or wool here, so go ahead and get the look — the only thing real is the affordable price.

Leather

Add a warm, casual look to a fancy chandelier with the look of saddle leather. Faux Leather Chandelier Shades, $22, crateandbarrel.com.

Wool

Get that lodge look with the romance of the Hudson Bay point blanket — in cozy flannel. Flannel Multi-Stripe Sheet Set, $225/queen set. thebay.com.

Animal skin

Cover your floors with whimsy and style with a trendy animal skin rug. Exotica Tiger 3x5 all-wool rug, $112, ecarpetgallery.com.

Wood

Water resistant and easy-to-install wood-look vinyl floors give the warmth and character of a New York brownstone at a fraction of the price. Allure Chateau Vinyl Parquet, $3/square foot homedepot.ca.

Birch

Sip a drink from what looks like a birch tree branch. Canadian Birch Straws, $14/box, anthropologie.com.

Fur

Add a touch of luxury to the corner of a sofa or the end of a bed. Spotted Lemur Faux Fur Throw, $99, urbanbarn.com.

Stone

Simple stone shapes offer a contemporary feel to the bathroom. Stone Resin Bath Accessories, $5-10, cb2.com.

The secrets of dry cleaning revealed

What is dry cleaning? How does it work? Is it really bad for my clothing or is this a myth?

CHARLES THE BUTLER
askcharlesthebutler@metronews.ca
For more, visit charlesmacpherson.com

Here's a hint: It's more like wet cleaning. ISTOCK IMAGES

I never really actually understood what dry cleaning was until I learned from my friend Jeremy Creed that dry cleaning has nothing to do with dry — but is in fact wet — just the opposite of what we think about it.

Clothes that are dry-cleaned will not go near water, but are in fact traditionally submerged in a dry-cleaning liquid. The most common of these chemicals is perchlorethylene, more commonly known as perc. Garments are submerged in perc for a short period of time.

The chemical removes the dirt from the garment and the garment is then dried, pressed and packaged for the customer.

Today, many dry cleaners also use different cleaning systems such as the commonly known wet cleaning systems. These actually use water in combination with different dry cleaning chemicals.

This wet cleaning system still isn't good for everything, but is slowly improving and getting better and better while becoming increasingly popular with professional dry cleaning companies.

Last but not least are the home dry cleaning kits. I personally have never been happy with the results. Particularly if you have a good piece of clothing that is expensive and a classic item you want to keep for many years.

What makes the dry cleaner so good at his or her job is not just the cleaning portion, but what happens to the garment after it has been cleaned. This includes steaming, pressing and packaging the item so that it stays at its very best.

Finally, I personally wouldn't use dry cleaning every day on all of my clothes, but there are times when it is absolutely necessary to dry-clean garments and times when it's not. I say everything in moderation and if you are going to pick a dry cleaner, make sure they are reputable.

Three decor lines we're watching

Pretty plates

We're loving Mateus, a fantastical and colourful ceramics company from Sweden. "Twenty years ago there wasn't any color on the table," explains designer and CEO Teresa Lundahl about the company's start. "I'm from Portugal and I had married a Swedish man and didn't have a job." So the former model decided to combine fashion colours she'd seen on Paris and New York runways with the traditional ceramics from her homeland for a whimsical tabletop collection. Now, her one-of-a-kind pieces, which are handcrafted in Portugal, are sold worldwide. They're perfect as wedding or housewarming gifts, or just to liven up your boring leftovers.

Zara invades your home

Zara is our beloved go-to for fashion-forward pieces perfect for nights out, job interviews, and just about anytime you want your clothes to lie about your paycheck. Now the brand has expanded its awesome repertoire. Last week marked the debut of zarahome.com, which features home decor that'll make your apartment just as chic as your wardrobe.

Kobenstyle, the iconic Scandinavian enameled cookware designed by Jens Quistgaard in 1956, is back. You've drooled over its high-gloss colours, cool sculptural handles and inventive lids that double as trivets in vintage stores, and now you can buy them brand new. Weekend warriors: Now's the perfect time to get some work done around the house

Indoors. With a little guidance, you can get your home in shape by Monday morning

JULIA WEST
Metro World News in Philadelphia

If you look around your house or apartment and start to list all the improvements you could make, you might just give up before you even start.

Home improvements can be overwhelming when you approach them all at once.

Now that the temperature has dropped, take a weekend here and there to tinker on various indoor projects and you'll be surprised how much you accomplish.

1. Install a simmer switch
This takes very little money and just a basic understanding of wiring.

Or check out YouTube to watch the experts do it. You'll want to install a dimmer — and set the mood — in every room of your house.

2. Rethink storage
Break out of the drab cupboard and expose your dishes, spices, and canned soups.

Open-shelving can be done in almost any room in the house.

If you want to show off your extensive library just look into DIY shelving kits.

You and your living room just got a lot smarter.

3. Design a gallery wall
Pick up a bunch of picture frames in various sizes. You can go to the thrift store or the department store, it all depends on your budget.

Fill the frames with photos, clippings, scrap wallpaper, whatever you want. Place frames on the floor to figure out how you want to cluster them together.

Go big and take up a whole wall or create small groupings.

It's attention-grabbing and can be done regardless of how much space you have.

4. Give your backslash some life
It's impressive what a few vibrant tiles can do to a kitchen.

Play around with pattern ideas and colour schemes, glue those suckers to the area behind your kitchen sink and under your cabinets, and you'll feel like you remodeled the whole kitchen.

5. Splurge if you can
This is for those that have the ability to drop some serious cash on their upgrades.

Think about what room you like best. Are you an aspiring culinary whiz in the kitchen or a studious worker in the den? Do you primp for what seems like hours in the bathroom?

Find your favourite spot and make it even better. Install that open range stovetop or television that pops up from behind a bookshelf. Go nuts.

Install a dimmer to set the mood in any room of the house. ISTOCK IMAGES

Paint refresh

Commonly recognized as one of the easiest and most cost-effective interior updates, painting is a weekend project that can completely transform your home.

However, low-quality, inexpensive paint will likely require a number of coats to get the coverage needed.

"To avoid increased time and cost, choose a premium line of paint in a colour that you love," says Donna Schroder, the colour marketing manager for Pratt & Lambert Paints.

When choosing paint for your next weekend project, remember that a quality product will achieve the best end result and save you time and money in the long run.

Kick things up with spicy bites and cooling dips

"Everyone loves traditional cold cooked shrimp around a spicy seafood sauce," write Elizabeth Baird and Rose Murray in Canada's Favourite Recipes. "This version is just the reverse . . . spicy shrimp, served hot with a cooling dip on the side."

1. Sauce: In a small bowl, combine the mayonnaise, fresh ginger, lime zest and lime juice. (Make-ahead: Cover and refrigerate for up to 6 hours.)

2. Shrimp: In a small bowl, combine 1 tsp (5 ml) of the oil, the lime juice, coriander, paprika, cumin, brown sugar, salt, oregano and cayenne. In a large bowl, evenly coat the shrimp with the mixture. Cover and marinate at room temperature for 20 minutes. (Make-ahead: Cover and refrigerate for up to 3 hours.)

3. In a large skillet, heat the remaining 2 tsp (10 ml) of canola oil over medium-high heat. Stir-fry the marinated shrimp until bright pink (no longer opaque) and just cooked through, 1 to 2 minutes. Serve hot. Arrange on a platter with the sauce for dipping; garnish with lime wedges.

Roasted Squash Soup

"Roasting the squash enhances its own natural sugars. Pancetta, an Italian bacon that is salt-cured but not smoked, is now available in the deli counters of most supermarkets," write Elizabeth Baird and Rose Murray in Canada's Favourite Recipes.

1. Cut the squash in half, remove the seeds and roast, cut-side down and covered with foil, in a greased or parchment paper–lined baking pan in a 400 F (200 C) oven until tender, about 45 minutes. When cool enough to handle, scrape the flesh from the rind.

2. Meanwhile, in a large saucepan, cook the pancetta over medium heat until crisp, about 5 minutes. With a slotted spoon, transfer to paper towels to drain. Refrigerate.

3. In the pan drippings, over medium-low heat, cook the onions, garlic, sage and hot pepper flakes until the onions are very soft, about 10 minutes, stirring occasionally. Add the roasted squash, broth, and salt and pepper to taste. Bring to a boil, reduce the heat, cover and simmer, stirring often, for 20 minutes for flavours to blend.

4. Purée in a blender (holding down the lid) in batches or with an immersion blender until smooth.

5. Return to a clean saucepan and gently reheat. Taste and adjust the seasoning.

6. Serve in heated bowls, garnishing each serving with a dollop of sour cream, a sprinkle of diced tomato and pancetta.

Ingredients

- 1 butternut squash (about 2 3/4 lb/1.25 kg)
- 4 oz (125 g) pancetta, coarsely chopped
- 2 onions, coarsely chopped
- 2 cloves garlic, minced
- 1 1/2 tbsp (22 ml) chopped fresh sage
- 1/4 tsp (1 ml) hot pepper flakes
- 6 cups (1.5 l) chicken broth
- salt and ground black pepper
- sour cream
- 1 large ripe tomato, diced

Pippen joined Obama for election-day basketball

Former Chicago Bulls star Scottie Pippen says U.S. President Barack Obama has a "smooth game" on the basketball court.

Pippen described playing basketball with the president Tuesday afternoon in a story on the Chicago Bulls website. He played on Obama's team in an election-day game complete with referees and a running clock. Pippen and Obama's team won the game.

Pippen says the president was "very easy to approach" and says Obama isn't an overly aggressive player, probably because he doesn't want to get hurt.

Raps outgunned in Dallas

O.J. Mayo and Chris Kaman each scored 22 points as the short-handed Dallas Mavericks won their third straight game, beating the Toronto Raptors 109-104 Wednesday night.

The Mavericks, who jumped out to a 16-point lead early in the second quarter, improved to 4-1 for the first time since 2007-08.

Raptors point guard Kyle Lowry, the team's leading scorer, didn't play after spraining his right ankle Tuesday night against Oklahoma City.

Cornish up for CFL's top player award

Most Outstanding. Stampeders running back up against Argos' Chad Owens, who is nominated for an award for a third straight year

Jon Cornish is again chasing CFL history.

The Calgary Stampeders running back was named a finalist for the league's outstanding player award, along with receiver/kick-returner Chad Owens of the Toronto Argonauts.

Cornish ran for a league-best 1,457 yards and not only became the first Canadian to lead the CFL in rushing since '88 but also broke Norm Kwong's 56-year-old record for most rushing yards in a season by a Canuck of 1,437.

The six-foot, 217-pound native of New Westminster, B.C., could become the first Canadian to claim the award since Tony Gabriel in 1978. Gabriel and former standout quarterback Russ Jackson (1963, '66, '69) are the only Canadians to ever win it.

And Cornish would be the first running back to do so since Montreal's Mike Pringle in '98.

"It's going to be very interesting," Cornish said. "I think him coming out of the East is sort of a statement about how the season has played out.

"It hasn't been a typical season in terms of statistics. You have a special-teams player leading the league in receiving and you have a running back (outgaining) the longest receiver. It's very interesting."

Toronto head coach Scott Milanovich said there isn't much to choose between Owens and Cornish.

"He's had a great season too," Milanovich said of Cornish. "They're both deserving."

Owens agreed.

"Cornish is an awesome player," he said. "He's obviously done what he needed to do to get to this point, to get nominated as well.

"He's a hell of a football player."

This marks the third straight year Owens has been nominated for an award. He was named the league's top special-teams player in 2010 and was the finalist last year to B.C. kicker Paul McCallum.

Cornish and Montreal Alouettes linebacker Shea Emry, of Richmond, B.C., were nominated in two categories.

They're finalists for the top Canadian award while Emry will go up against Edmonton linebacker J.C. Sherritt for outstanding defensive player honours. Sherritt had a league-record 130 tackles this season along with three sacks and five interceptions.

Are expectations too high for CBA?

NHL lockout. Labour expert says compromises must be made internally by players and owners for deal to be reached

The hardest part, for Gary Bettman and Donald Fehr, might not be negotiating with each other.

Indeed, the commissioner of the NHL and the executive director of the NHL Players' Association may well find negotiating with their own people — who have their own expectations of what a season-saving deal ought to look like — to be the biggest hurdle.

"There has to be some compromise, otherwise there would have been a settlement a long time ago," said George Smith, a former management-side labour negotiator who is now a lecturer at Queen's University in Kingston, Ont.

"There are at least three sets of negotiations going on: The ones across the table and the ones within the owners' group and the players' group. There have been promises made to each of their members to get us to the point where we are today."

For the second day in a row, the NHL and NHLPA went underground to hammer out the issues with an eye on saving the season. Wednesday's session started later than expected in the afternoon as both sides used the morning to strategize internally.

With a snowstorm hitting New York, some of the players who had been in on Tuesday's meetings — including Sidney Crosby — went home early.

Tuesday's seven-hour session dealt largely with contract issues and revenue sharing, and was said to be the first true bargaining of these collective bargaining talks.

Wednesday's session was scheduled to deal with the most contentious issue: Paying players their salaries in full while at the same time getting the two sides to share hockey-related revenue 50-50.

Pressure escalating

Tension seems to be rising from all corners of the NHL.

- Pockets of owners and players are believed to be exerting pressure on leadership to get a new deal, while Molson Coors CEO Peter Swinburn, whose company is a major league sponsor, told The Canadian Press in an interview that the brewer will seek compensation when the lockout ends.
- "There will be some redress for us as a result of this," said Swinburn. "I can't quantify that and I don't know because I don't know the scale of how long the lockout is going to last."

UFC. Silva will have eye on GSP's return to octagon

Middleweight champion Anderson Silva will be cageside in Montreal next week to watch Georges St-Pierre's comeback fight against Carlos (Natural Born Killer) Condit.

"There's no doubt that Anderson Silva's showing up to cheer Georges St-Pierre on," UFC president Dana White said in a media conference call Wednesday. "He wants him to win this fight and he wants to fight him after."

St-Pierre, the UFC's welterweight title-holder who is returning from knee surgery, dismissed any Silva talk, however.

"I don't care about Anderson Silva," he said. "He can do whatever he wants. He can go to Florida, stay in Brazil if he wants. I'm focusing on Carlos Condit. That's all that matters to me."

St-Pierre (22-2) meets Condit (28-5) in the main event of UFC 154 on Nov. 17 at Montreal's Bell Centre.

A Silva-GSP superfight has been touted for some time.

The 37-year-old Silva, who holds the 185-pound title but has also fought at light-heavyweight (205), and St. Pierre, who campaigns at welterweight (170), are widely seen as the two best fighters in mixed martial arts.

Silva (33-4) is 16-0 since joining the UFC in 2006.

"I like what I do but I forgot I liked it.... I lost a little bit (of) the fire."

Georges St-Pierre, who says he now has a greater appreciation for mixed martial arts after injuring his knee in training last fall

White has said he expects the two to fight some time, probably at a to-be-determined location and with a catch weight somewhere between their two divisions.

"It's fun to talk about this superfight but I'm sure it's pissing Carlos off every time it's asked," said White. "He's got to get through Carlos Condit first."

Andrew Luck latest to go bald

Andrew Luck has joined the shaved squad, too.

Nearly three dozen players on the Indianapolis Colts have shaved their heads in a show of support for head coach Chuck Pagano, who is undergoing treatment for a form of leukemia.

Luck became a new member of the no-hair club Wednesday morning. Players and coaches were not available for comment because they were headed to Jacksonville, but a team spokesman confirmed that Luck will indeed look quite different when he takes off his helmet Thursday night.

Horoscopes

♈ Aries
March 21 - April 20
Demand to be taken seriously. Demand that others treat you with respect. If they don't, well, that's your cue to look elsewhere for companionship and love. You're special. Don't waste your time on people who can't see it.

♉ Taurus
April 21 - May 21
Try not to come across as cold. Those to whom you are close know that you sometimes find it hard to express your feelings but people you deal with in the wider world may think you are being rude.

♊ Gemini
May 22 - June 21
Quick decisions are not always good decisions, so take your time and get it right. Someone may be annoyed that you are moving slowly but they will be even more annoyed if you make a wrong move and they have to pay.

♋ Cancer
June 22 - July 23
You may be tempted to pack your bags and go some place where you don't have to deal with so many annoying people but in a few days you will feel better about your current situation. Hang in there.

♌ Leo
July 24 - Aug. 23
Try not to be too distrustful today. The planets indicate that what a colleague is offering you is not some kind of trick. Most people are honest, so accept the offer and enjoy what it brings.

♍ Virgo
Aug. 24 - Sept. 23
Your head and your heart are pulling you in different directions and, as always, your head will win in the end. Don't be so logical and rational though that you miss the feelings of love that others are sending your way.

♎ Libra
Sept. 24 - Oct. 23
You have worked hard to get to your present position and you are not about to give it up, no matter what others say you should do. Possession is nine-tenths of the law and you are simply not going to move.

♏ Scorpio
Oct. 24 - Nov. 22
Opportunity will come knocking today and you won't hesitate to let it in. Don't forget, however, that the flipside to opportunity is responsibility. Make sure you know what you are getting yourself into — then go for it.

♐ Sagittarius
Nov. 23 - Dec. 21
Mercury in your sign helps you see things clearly but it's in one of its retrograde phases at the moment, so not everything will be what it seems. Don't accept what others tell you without checking the facts for yourself.

♑ Capricorn
Dec. 22 - Jan. 20
You may wish you were some place else at the moment but before you start thinking about a change of scene, you have got to think about your cash flow situation. Are you living beyond your means? Do something about it.

♒ Aquarius
Jan. 21 - Feb. 19
You will be tempted to splash out on something luxurious today but if you are wise, you will resist. Your place in the world does not depend on how much you earn or how much bling you can afford.

♓ Pisces
Feb. 20 - March 20
You could miss out on a romantic opportunity today, simply because you are too shy to approach someone you fancy. It doesn't take much to smile and say hello, so be brave and make your move. You'll be glad you did. SALLY BROMPTON
